Dear Administrator,

In the ever-changing field of education, it is so important for educators to focus on teacher effectiveness and continued growth in their professional knowledge and practices. This year’s Michigan World Language Association Conference will provide this type of professional development for your World Languages teachers. For that reason, we would like to encourage you to make this special professional development opportunity available to your teachers.

During our two-day conference, your teacher will have access to high-quality sessions and workshops that address high-leverage World Language teaching practices, creating proficient language speakers and global citizens, and learn how to best prepare students for the newly adopted Seal of Biliteracy.

Please consider advocating for your World Language teachers to attend these enriching professional development opportunities. Well-known researcher Robert J. Marzano starts his work from the premise that “effective teachers are made, not born.” For more information and to register your teachers, visit miwla.org.

Thank you for your consideration. The Michigan World Language Association is here to support your teachers, our learners, and you.

Sincerely,

Michael Vrooman
